Dear Portfolio Show Visitor,

Thank you for being curious about what I have to present. I find expressing oneself to be of the utmost importance in cultivating connections with others. I'm indecisive on what medium I like best, and I think that's why I enjoy filmmaking so much. Not only does it combine all mediums of art, but it does so in a manner that allows for vision to flourish. I'm excited to see what stories I will tell, the people I will meet, and the films I will make.

Understanding that filmmaking is a collaborative process is always at the forefront of my mind when creating. Having a military background has enforced my sense of teamwork and dedication when devising a plan of action. I think one of my biggest strengths is my ability to adapt and my endurance in keeping the flow of creativity persistent. While making films can have its challenges, maintaining morale amongst everyone on set is crucial in navigating those challenges with ease.

I've been able to develop my skills in the filmmaking process by going through four years at Portland State University's film program. During which I've written numerous scripts and filmed/edited both narrative and documentary shorts.

Being an adaptable person with a good work ethic, who is always willing to learn new things. I think I would be a great asset to have on set or through the filmmaking process.

Sincerely,

Mitchell Wilcox.
