FILMMAKER

Dear Portfolio Show Visitor,

Thank you for taking the time to look through my portfolio! I grew up with an art teacher for a mom and a math geek for a dad, so while I learned to love both, nothing really combined these interests in a satisfying way until I found cinematography and editing. I love creating beautiful images and compelling stories, but I also love all the technical knowledge required to make them come to life. My name is Angelica Santos and I am a cinematographer and editor. During the past few years at Portland State, I have channeled my efforts towards developing my filmmaking skills and along the way I found an interest in language learning. On top of my English and Spanish fluency, I am double majoring in French and minoring in Italian. So with me, you not only get a good-natured and hard-working cinematographer, but you also get a language buddy with whom to practice your language skills.

I have shot, edited, and directed various student short films—some of which have required me to take on more than one role at a time. I spent a year shooting the process of putting on an AAPI musical at Portland State and am currently in the process of editing the footage into a feature-length documentary. Along with other documentary projects, my interest in people and their stories has grown as I've shot and/or conducted dozens of interviews. My goal is to help people tell their stories, either in documentary or narrative form, through cinematography and editing.

I look forward to meeting you and getting to connect.

Thank you,
Angelica Santos Perez
