Dear portfolio show visitor,

I am a film student nearing graduation from Portland State University and have been looking through any and all options available to me in the next step of my career. I have been studying film and video production since middle school, covering a wide range of skills across the pre, pro, and post production spheres. During courses that focus promotional material and branded content, I've found an environment in which I thrive, particularly creating branded media for the Friends of Family Farmers advocacy group.

Since beginning my journey as a film student at Portland State, I have been involved in the student media organization Sub-Basement Studios, a group where film students can increase their hands-on experience with equipment and the film production process. Having been involved since my freshman year, I have been a student leader with the group for 2 years, taking over as the station manager in the summer of 2022.

I have also recently been interning with Fortem Films, a local production company that specializes in music videos and branded content. I have mainly been working as a grip and cam op during this time, and it has given me great experience working in professional settings and introduced a number of connections for my future work.

I know I would make a fantastic part of any team and look forward to what the future holds for our work together.

Best Regards,

Eric Bacon
